"Topics of Danger?"

BY PASTOR DON GARDNER

"One of the unspoken rules of the American Culture is that conversations about religion, politics, or other personal beliefs are dangerous. To bring up such topics will most likely devolve into one person trying to convince another that their viewpoint is correct and that the listener is wrong."

I recently read this "warning" about living in this country. Yet, as an Ordained Minister of the Gospel, I suppose that I am one of those persons given both the expected privilege and responsibility of speaking up on, at least, one of those sensitive topics? Nonetheless, the quoting of writers, educators, theologians, or individuals that may have views on specific issues may be challenging to some listeners.

The role of preaching and teaching is to do more than merely indoctrinate Christian followers. Avoiding sensitive topics can never be what we learned from Jesus but that doesn't mean a minister should seek to antagonize without purpose. Jesus threw out the mantle of truth many a time with a full awareness that His ideas/concepts would be challenging His listeners....to their core! As is true of any good teacher, the hope is to engage the hearer with ideas and truths that assist that person to evaluate/consider how they may apply what they have heard to their own experience. Within the church context, it should be understood that the old Chinese adage is accurate for us all, "Live till you are old, Learn till you are old!" We are to be constantly in a growth mode even as we expand our understanding of God's plans for us. We are responsible to be active teachers and learners. This means that Christian teachers or preachers are to be available to the Holy Spirit's guidance for helping our church family stretch their thinking and purpose. I think it also obvious to us that there is a need for every member of our church to support all leaders of the church with strong prayer support. When any of us do planning or ministry without the Holy Spirit's leading, we err.
